Barrick's Golden Sunlight Mine Donates $50,000 to Jefferson Valley EMS for Advanced Communication Equipment

Golden Sunlight Mine, Montana – January 23, 2025 – Barrick Gold Corporation's (NYSE:GOLD)(TSX:ABX) Golden Sunlight Mine has contributed $50,000 to the Jefferson Valley EMS (JVEMS) to support the procurement of advanced digital communication equipment, ensuring JVEMS emergency response teams have the tools needed for effective and reliable communication during critical situations.

The funds will enable JVEMS to purchase state-of-the-art digital radios, enhancing their ability to coordinate emergency medical responses across the region. The new radios are essential for seamless communication, particularly in the rugged and remote areas of Jefferson Valley, where reliable technology can mean the difference between life and death.

This investment reflects Barrick's broader commitment to public safety and community well-being. By supporting initiatives like JVEMS, the Golden Sunlight Mine underscores its dedication to strengthening local infrastructure and empowering organizations that play a vital role in protecting and serving the community.

"Strong, effective emergency response services are critical to the safety and security of our communities," says Golden Sunlight Mine's interim general manager, Clint Mortensen. "We're proud to support Jefferson Valley EMS who work tirelessly to provide high-quality medical care to those in need, and we look forward to seeing the positive impact of this initiative."

This contribution was made possible through Barrick's Community Development Committee (CDC) process. CDCs are established at each of Barrick's operations worldwide and are comprised primarily of elected members who review and select proposals from the community to fund. Barrick's CDCs are self-directed but are guided by core development principles focused on five pillars: economic development, education, environment, health and cultural heritage.

Beyond this donation, Barrick remains steadfast in its commitment to fostering community development and sustainability. Across its global operations, Barrick invests in programs and partnerships that drive economic growth, enhance local infrastructure and improve quality of life for its neighboring communities.

Golden Sunlight is honored to contribute to this important initiative and reaffirms its dedication to building resilient and thriving communities.
