Jonathan Collins has been named Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Owens Corning, effective August 10.

Collins succeeds Todd Fister, who assumes the role of President and Chief Operating Officer, following a planned transition from his previously announced dual responsibilities as Chief Financial and Operating Officer. Together, Jonathan and Todd have a powerful combination of capabilities to accelerate our growth and create additional value for customers and shareholders."

Collins joins Owens Corning from Clarivate, a global provider of transformative intelligence through data, insights and analytics, and workflow solutions, where he served as Chief Financial Officer since 2021. There, he led the capital deployment to integrate generative AI into the company's solutions while significantly expanding free cash flow. Prior to joining Clarivate, he was Chief Financial Officer at Dana Incorporated where he led the financial, information technology, corporate strategy, and business development functions as well as the digital solutions and aftermarket businesses. He also spent six years at ProQuest where he served as Chief Financial Officer and Vice President Global Financial Operations. Collins earned an MBA with distinction from the University of Michigan's Stephen M. Ross School of Business and holds a bachelor's degree from Cedarville University.

Collins said, "I am excited to join Owens Corning at this important point in the company's evolution. Owens Corning has leading market positions, a disciplined operating model, and commitment to delivering strong performance and cash generation that provide a compelling foundation for long-term value creation.
