Owens Corning Names Annie Baymiller Executive Vice President, Chief Information Officer to Accelerate Digital Technology-Driven Growth

2025-12-04

TOLEDO, Ohio--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Owens Corning (NYSE: OC), a building products leader, today announced that it has elevated Chief Information Officer Annie Baymiller to Executive Vice President, Chief Information Officer. Baymiller's promotion reinforces the commitment made at Owens Corning's 2025 Investor Day to accelerate the use of advanced digital tools and analytics to enhance efficiency, support customer growth and engagement, and strengthen market leadership.

Owens Corning has elevated Chief Information Officer Annie Baymiller to Executive Vice President, Chief Information Officer. In this role, she will continue to drive value creation through the deployment and scaling of leading technology that will be instrumental in driving increased efficiencies and delivering value to customers.

In this role, Baymiller will continue to drive value creation through the deployment and scaling of leading technology, including emerging technologies such as generative AI and agentic AI, that will be instrumental in driving increased efficiencies and delivering value to customers. This focus on leading technology is a key component of The OC Advantage™, a set of capabilities that are unique to Owens Corning, valuable to customers, and central to the company's enterprise strategy to accelerate growth and enhance performance.

"Annie has been a driving force behind our technology agenda. Her passion for leveraging emerging technology has helped us unlock new capabilities across our enterprise, from digital tools that support our customers to advanced digital infrastructure that improves efficiency and manufacturing productivity," said Brian Chambers, Chair and Chief Executive Officer. "Annie's leadership will be pivotal as we accelerate our digital capabilities, execute our enterprise strategy, and continue delivering on our commitments to customers and shareholders.”

Baymiller has served as the company’s Chief Information Officer since 2023. She joined Owens Corning in 2006 as part of the Information Systems Development Program, and has held a variety of leadership roles focused on digital technology expansion across the company’s market-leading businesses and key geographic regions. Throughout her nearly 20-year career with Owens Corning, she has advanced the company’s enterprise digital capabilities, expanded the use of analytics, and driven digital technology innovation to improve customer engagement and increase operational efficiencies. Her strategic vision has been instrumental in strengthening Owens Corning’s technology roadmap and enabling the company’s growth.

Baymiller will continue reporting directly to Chair and Chief Executive Officer Brian Chambers and will serve as a member of the company’s Executive Committee.
